Educational Tools Build Our Tomorrows

Man's greatest asset is his brain. The ability to think and reason separates him from other animals and makes his a higher form of life. Man has risen from a time when his universe consisted solely of animal strength and sensuality, to a period when mental awareness and rationalization have taken precedence.

The elementary grades aided us by providing the fundamental tools of learning. In junior and senior high school these tools are broadened and we learn the methods of and reasons for applying them to tomorrow's greater society. Educated man manipulates his enviroment, his enviroment does not manipulate him.

The Journalism class dedicates the 1965 Northern Light to Miss Alice A. Arnold. Her co-operation and understanding of the student body has guided Northites for many years. In her role as a counselor Miss Arnold has played an important part in the lives of former students and has helped them through a difficult period of their development. This role has been invaluable in the lives of many students.

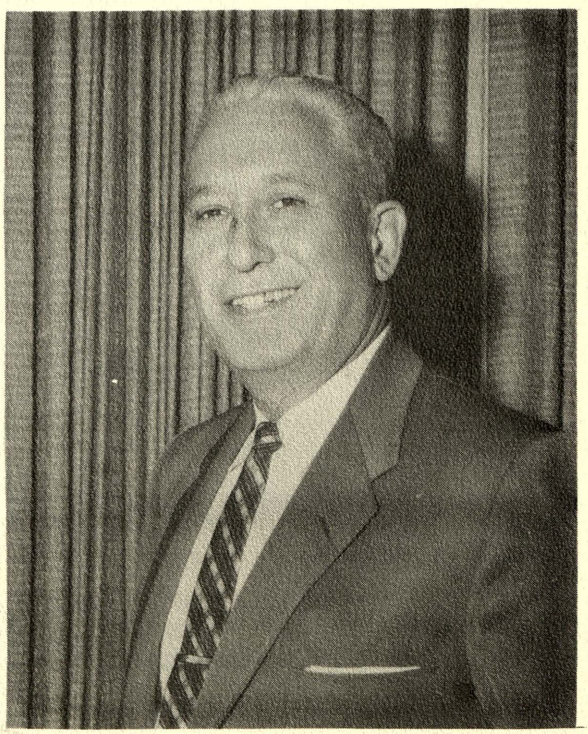
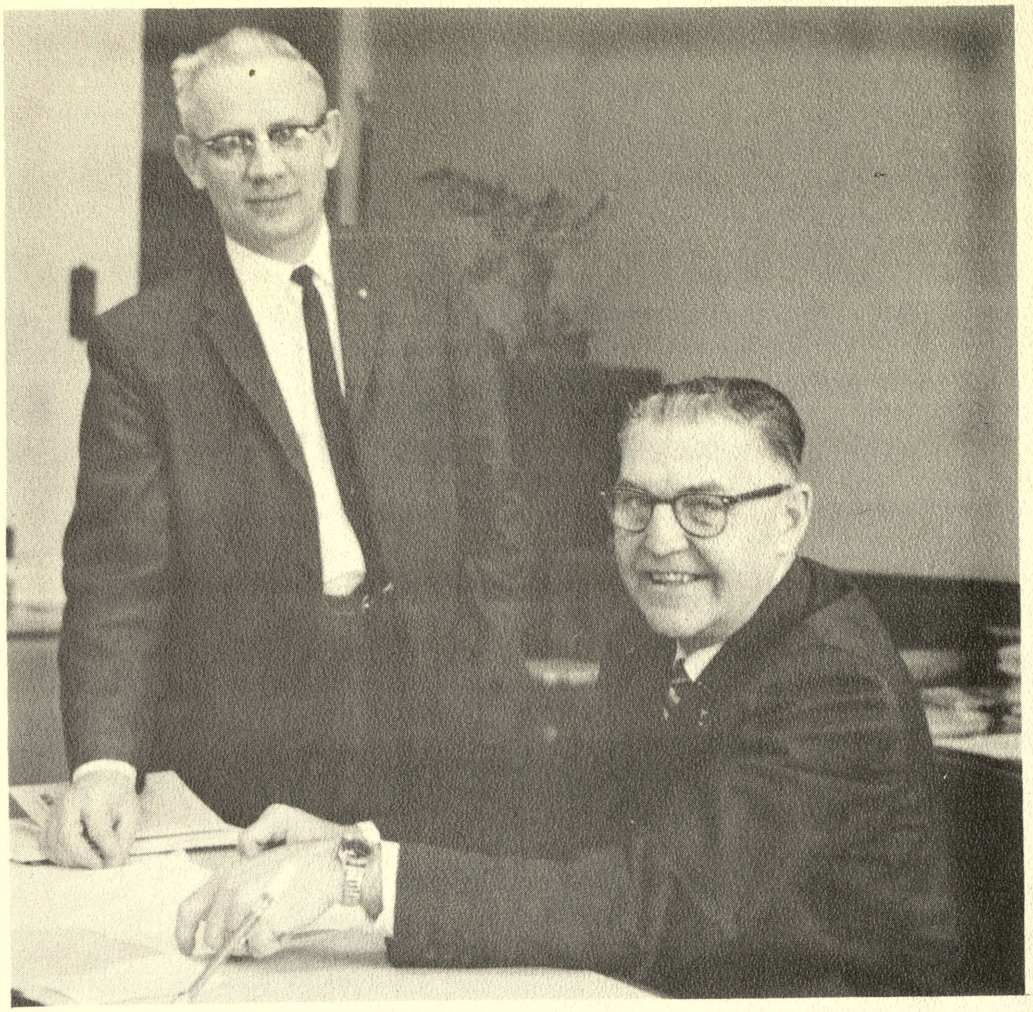
Y-Teens Posed 'Neath Lincoln

"Lincoln, the Young Lawyer" by the famed sculptor Larado Taft was purchased in 1927-28 from monies raised by the students selling papers. Mr. Taft personally measured the niche and recommended this first small plaster casting of the famous statue.



Mr. C. C. Coulter, Superintendent of Saginaw Schools

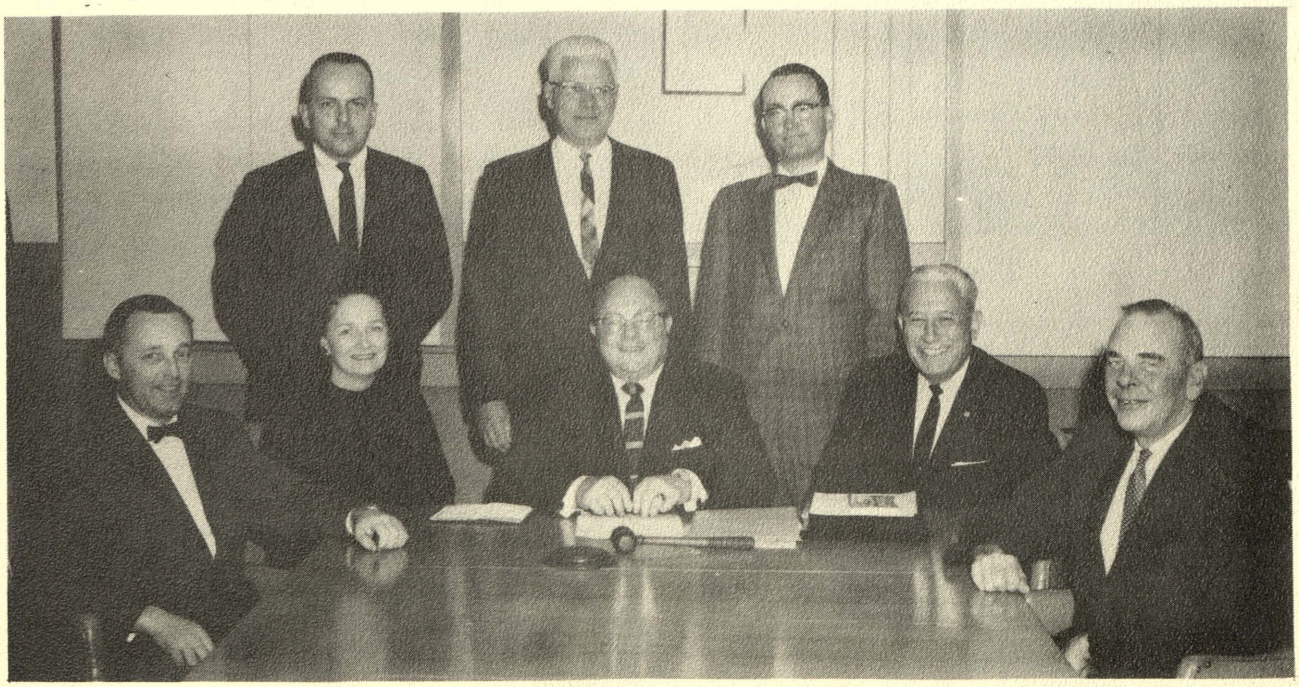


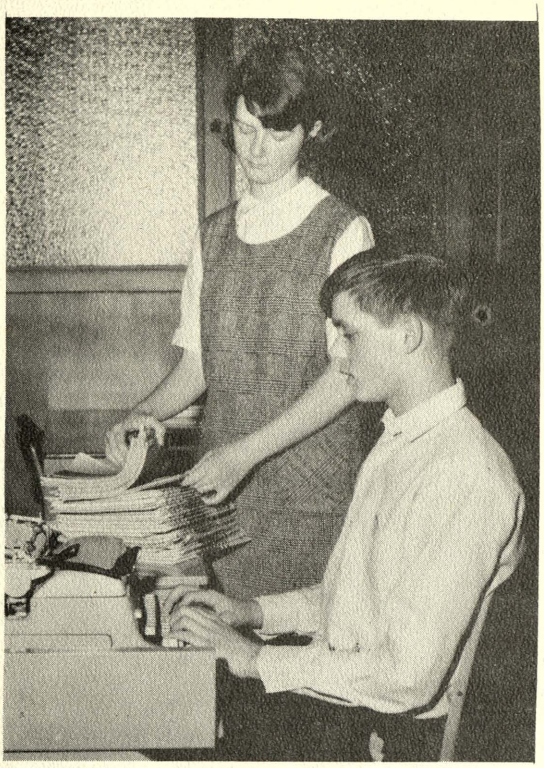
Mr. John D. Parr, assistant principal. Seated Mr. Floyd E. Byron, principal.

Board of Education

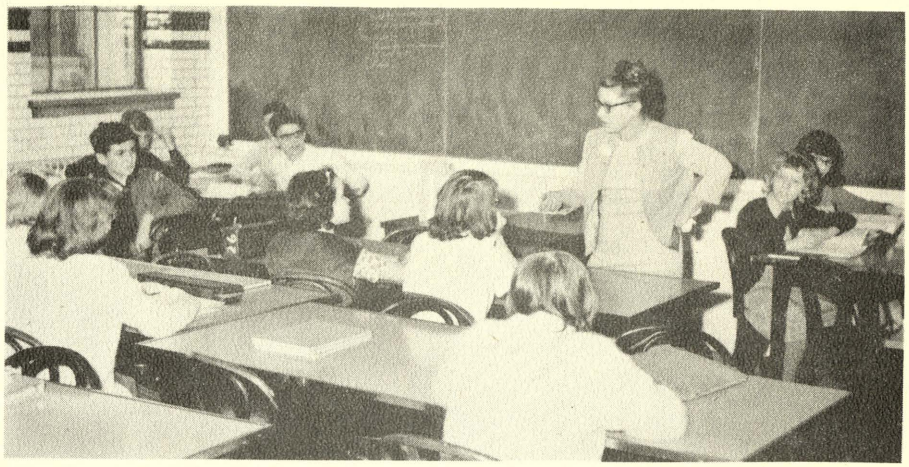
Seated: Mr. E. P. Stansbury, treasurer, Mrs. Dorothy R. Beck, Mr. W. C. Averill, president, Mr. C. C. Coulter, Superintendent, and Mr. W. A. Leesch.

Standing: Mr. R. J. Heagany, secretary, Mr. H. M. Karls and Dr. J. O. Goodell.





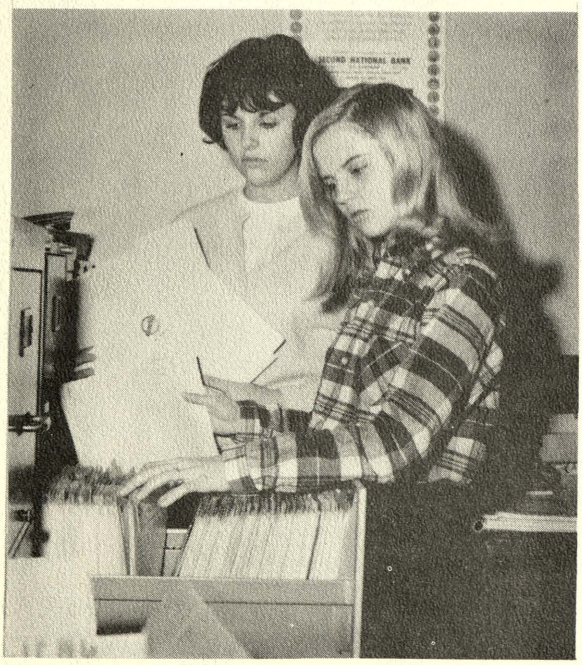
Connie Moessner and Jim Taylor checked Kuder tests.



Guidance class discussed occupations.

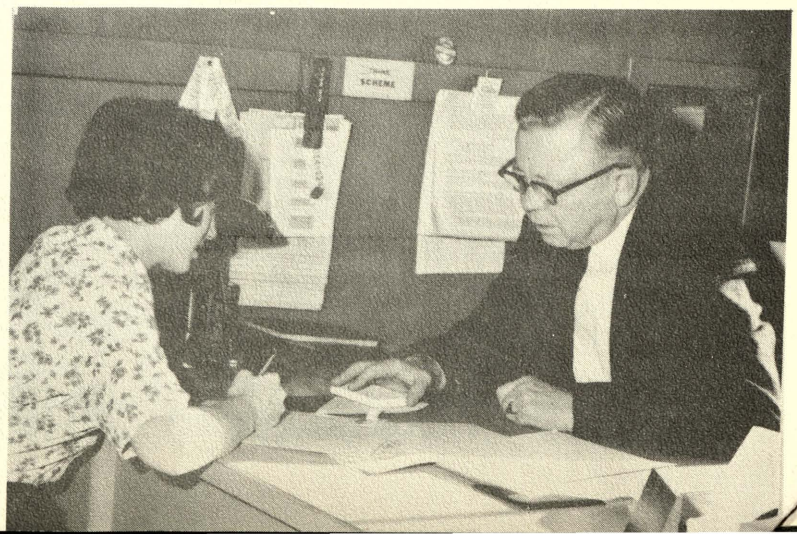
Counselors Aid Students

Linda Hahn filled out her guidance folder under the direction of Miss Arnold, counselor.



Janis Fedor and Paula Sovia, student secretaries, filed folders.

Mr. Johnson helped Willowdean Cassow in choosing her high school program.



North's counselors could be called jacks of all trades. They give standardized tests, teach guidance classes for seventh grades, help us with class selection, talk with our parents about our marks, and help us solve our social and personal problems and questions.

FACULTY

During our search for education our teachers aid and encourage us in reaching our goals. They also instruct us in the use of educational tools. Character building, intellectual curiosity and personality development were fostered by our teachers.

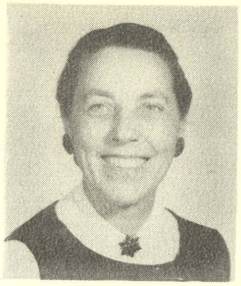
Over four hundred years of teaching students of North was represented by the Twenty-Five Year Club. Club membership included Miss Austin, Miss Arnold, Miss Trask, Miss Stenger, Miss Meyer, Miss Faist, Mrs. Walker. Back row: Mr. Soblesky, Mr. MacMacken, Mr. Newberg, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Somerville.

P. Kothe and C. Posey aided Mrs. Otto as she counted lunch money.



Mrs. Ellithorpe

Mrs. Otto

North's smooth-running office was due to the efficiency of the school secretaries, Mrs. Janet Ellithorpe and Mrs. Edith Otto. Selling pencils, making change, finding the lost and giving the found— these were some of the extra services they gave while still issuing bulletins and absence reports.

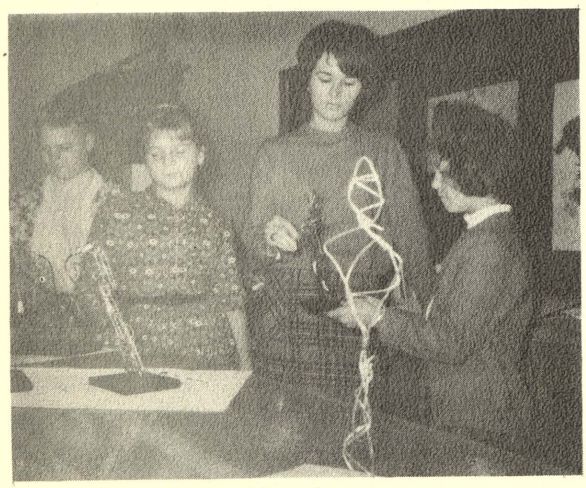
Frank Alex and Mrs. Ellithorpe discussed school blueprints.

Mrs. Ewen, city nurse, discussed appointments with Mrs. Ellithorpe.

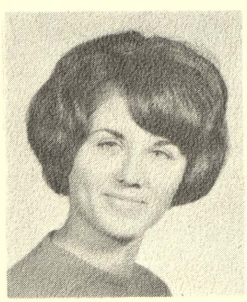
Office Helpers

Bottom row: S. Minard, L. Walsh, M. Robertson, D. Lassahn, H. Lennox and B. Daniels.
Middle row: Mrs. Ellithorpe, S. Abler, C. Posey, S. Bowen, P. Rice, P. Kothe and Mrs. Otto.
Top row: G. Zariske, K. Kroll, M. Visnaw, L. Chamberlain, C. Stimpson and J. Meyer.

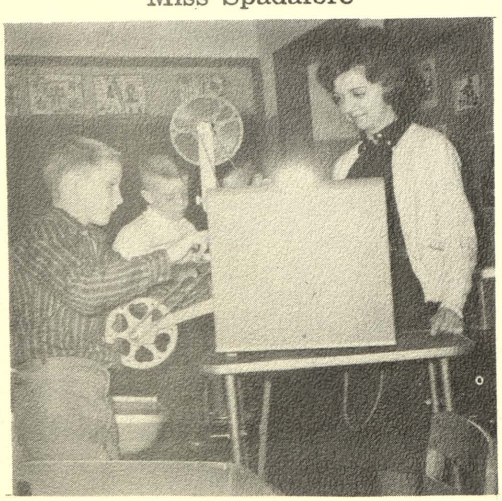
Miss Ransfore and Mrs. Bosley

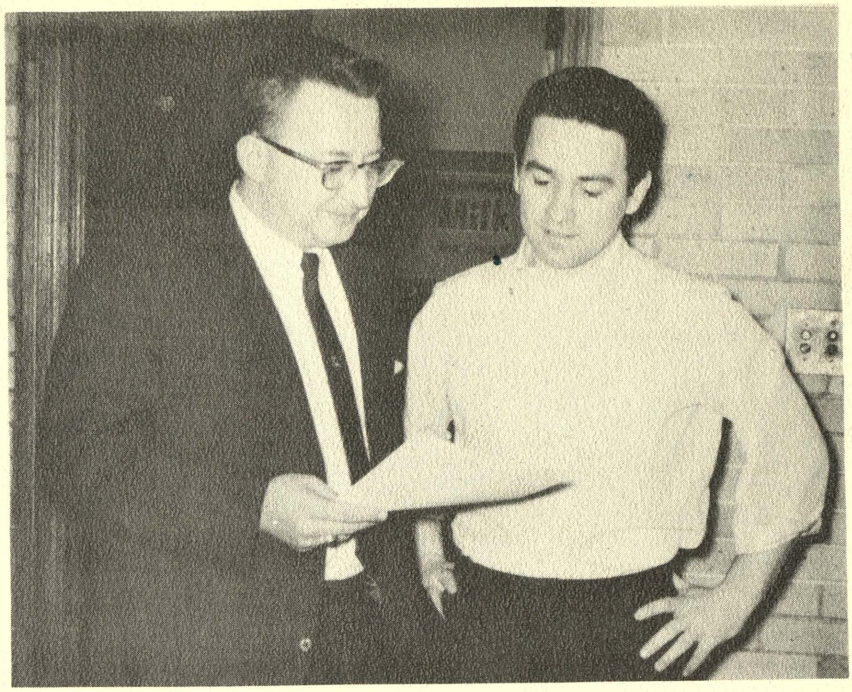


Mrs. Meagher



Miss Spadafore



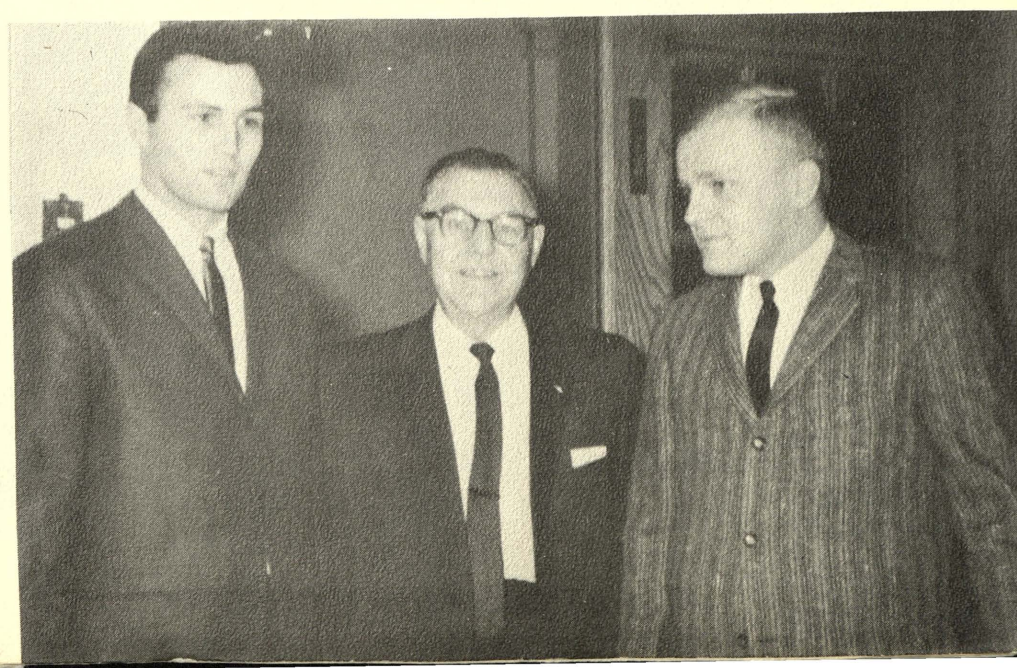


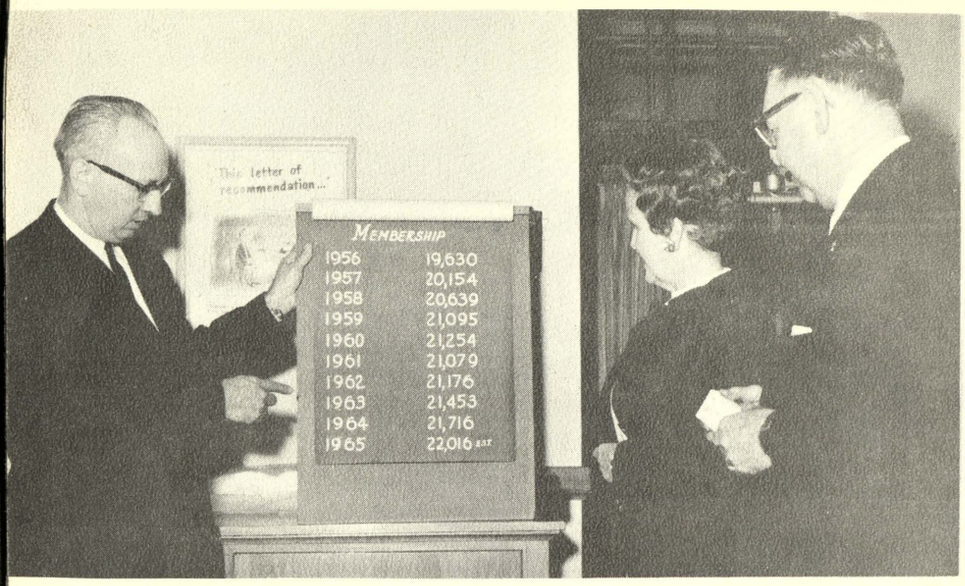
Dr. Quick and Mr. Steele

Six student teachers came to North this year to find practical application for their teacher training from the universities. From Central Michigan under the Co-ordinator Dr. Alan Quick were Mr. Donald Steele teaching with Mr. Goodenow, Miss Ann Ransford with Mrs. Bosley, Mr. David Roberts with Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Stephen Newlon with Mr. Soblesky. From Michigan State came Miss Patricia Spadafore with Mrs. Wells and and Mrs. Carol Meagher with Mr. Foulds. Their Co-ordinator was Mr. R. R. Zellers.

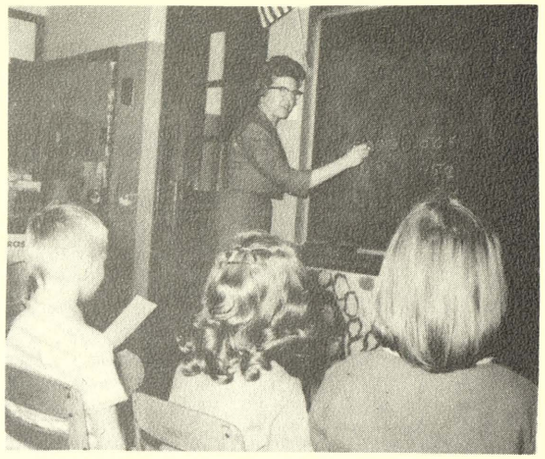
Students Assume Teaching Roles

Mr. Roberts, Mr. Byron and Mr. Newlon



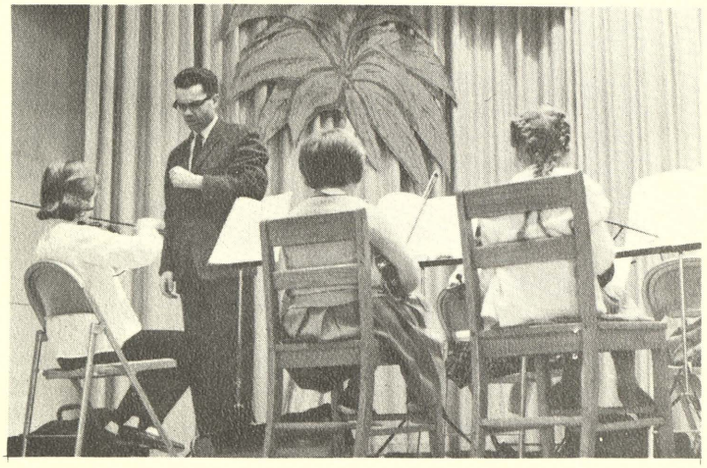


Mr. L. Soper, assistant superintendent discussed the Millage Vote Issue with Mr. Byron and Miss Rhea Miller, Music Supervisor of Saginaw Schools.



Miss Diane Umstead, reading supervisor.

Specialists Enrich Curriculum

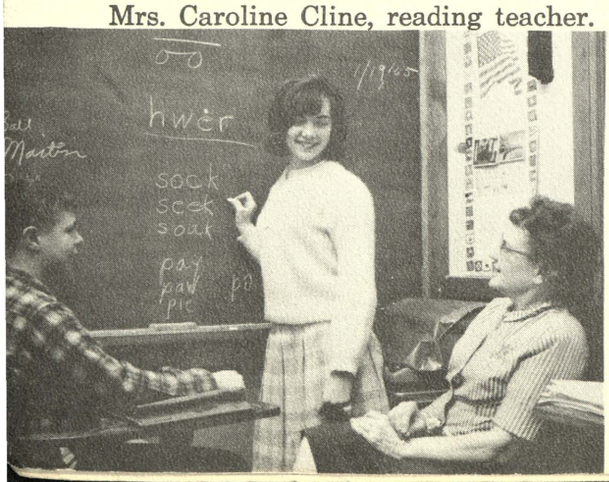


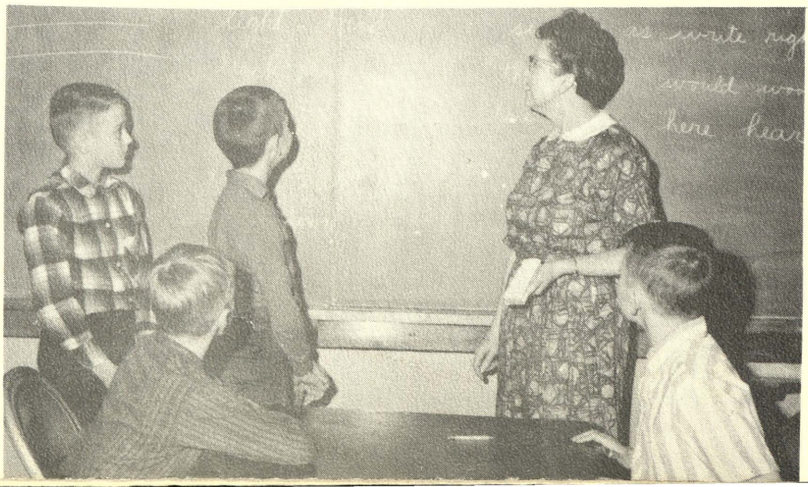
Strings were taught by Mr. J. W. Ergo. Other string teachers were Mr. D. Carlson and Mr. C. I. Brown.

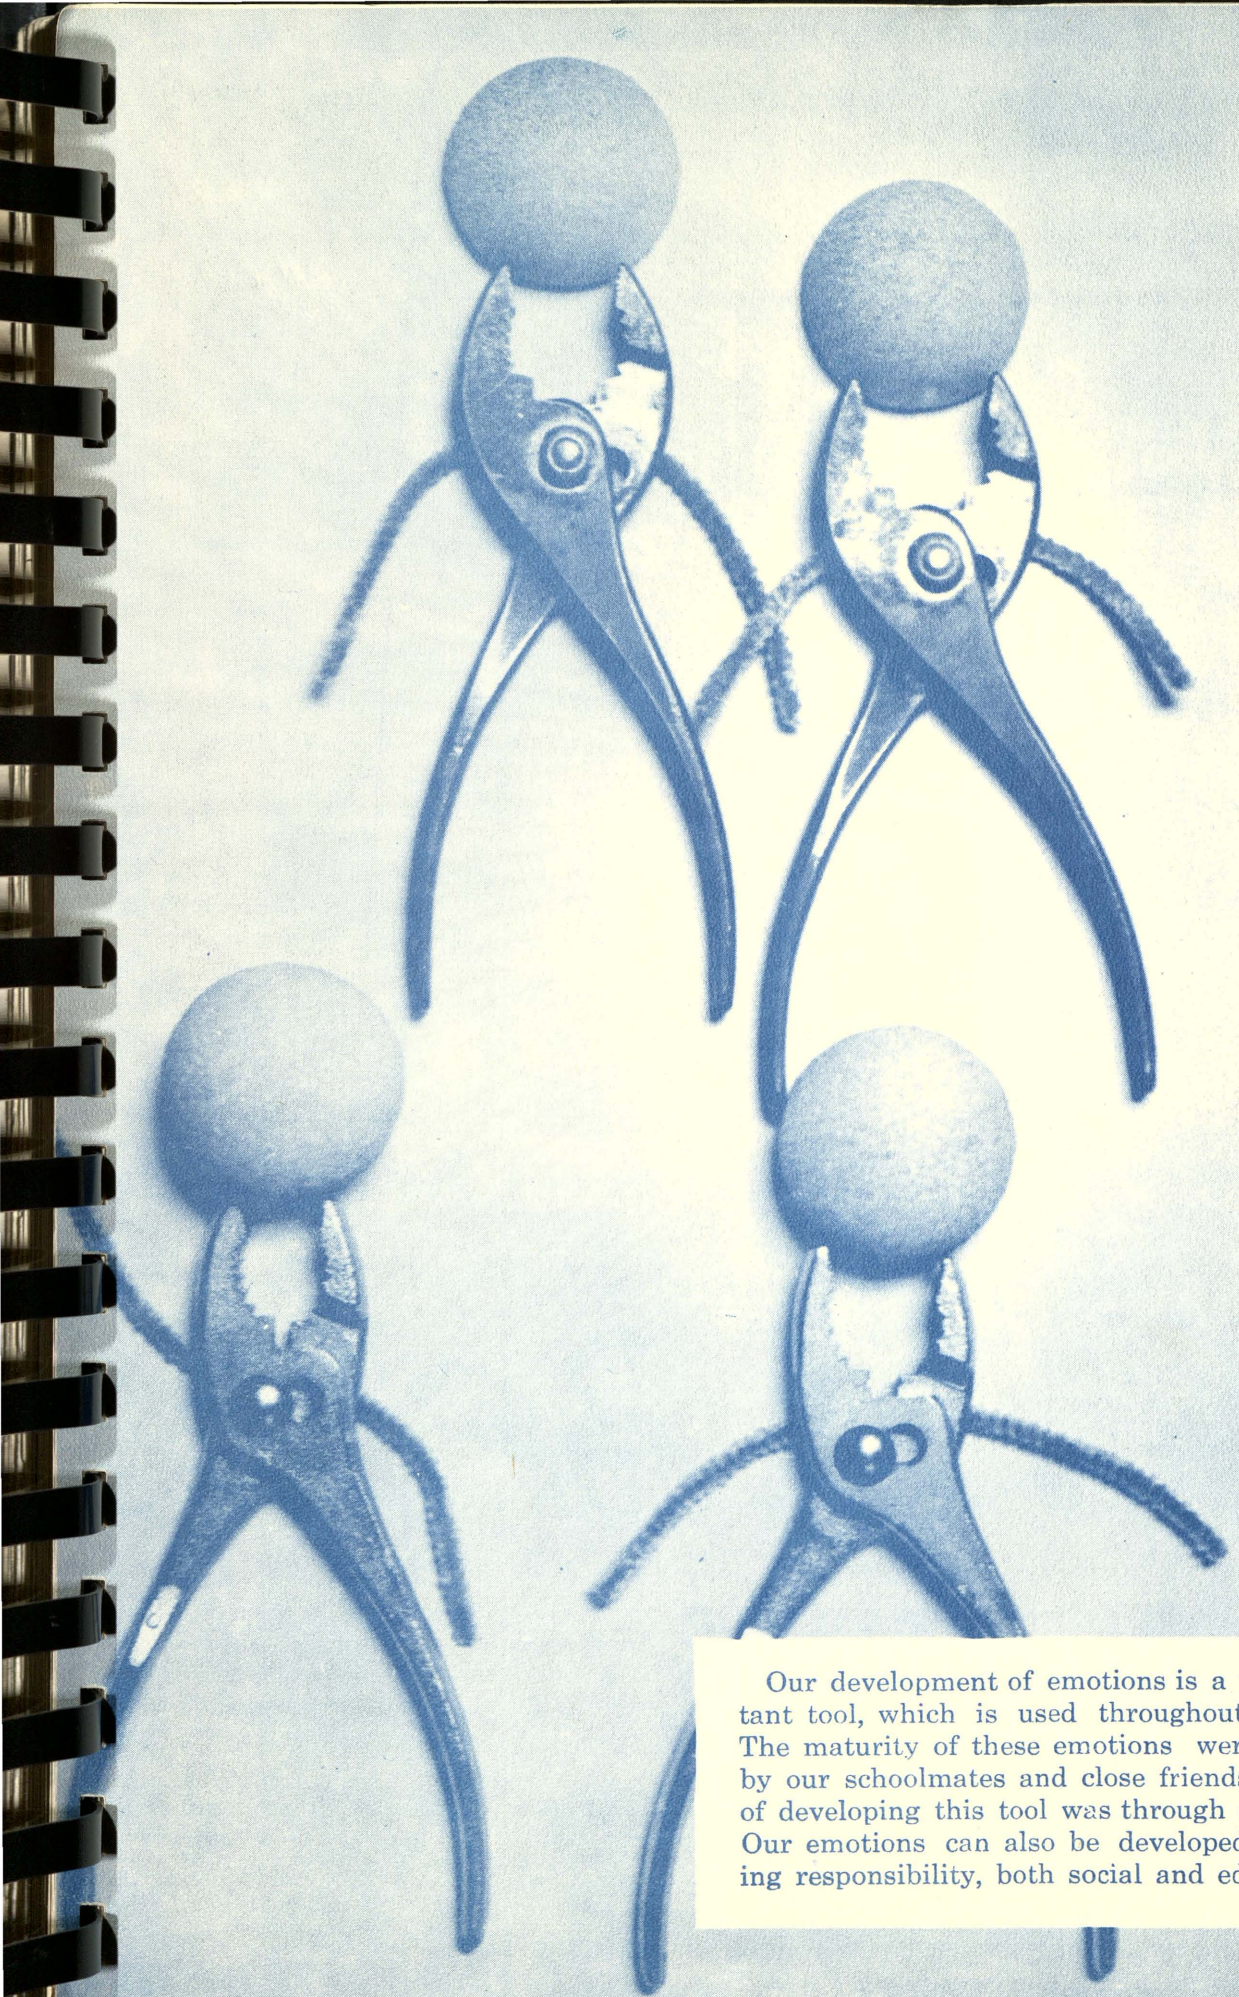
Miss Mary Lou Rau, speech specialist.

Miss Vivian Davis, elementary reading specialist.

Mrs. Caroline Cline, reading teacher.







STUDENTS

Our development of emotions is a very important tool, which is used throughout our lives. The maturity of these emotions were promoted by our schoolmates and close friends. Our way of developing this tool was through self control. Our emotions can also be developed by assuming responsibility, both social and educational.

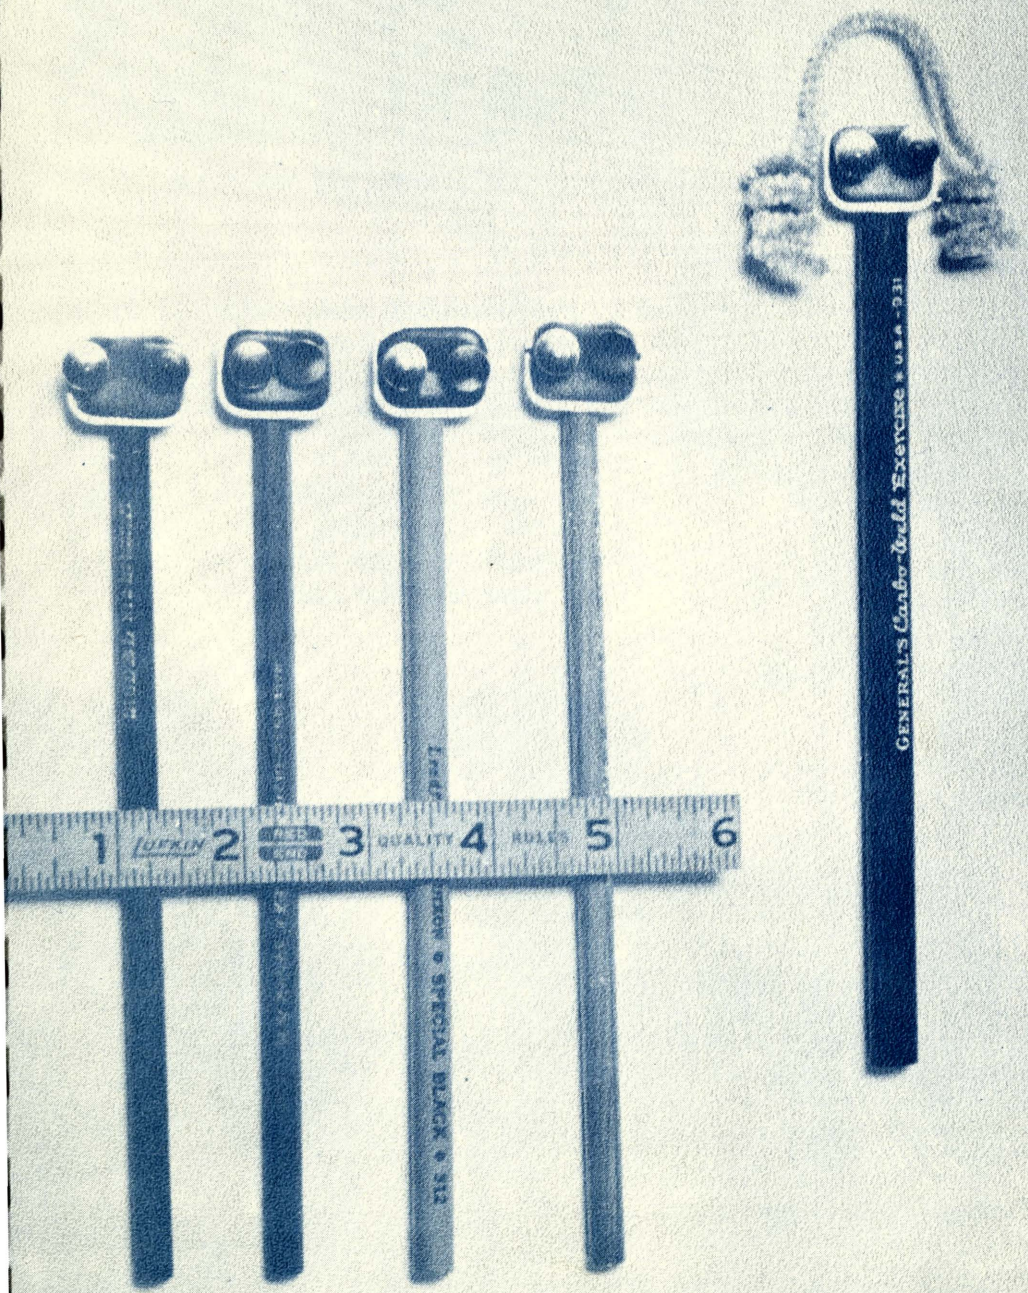
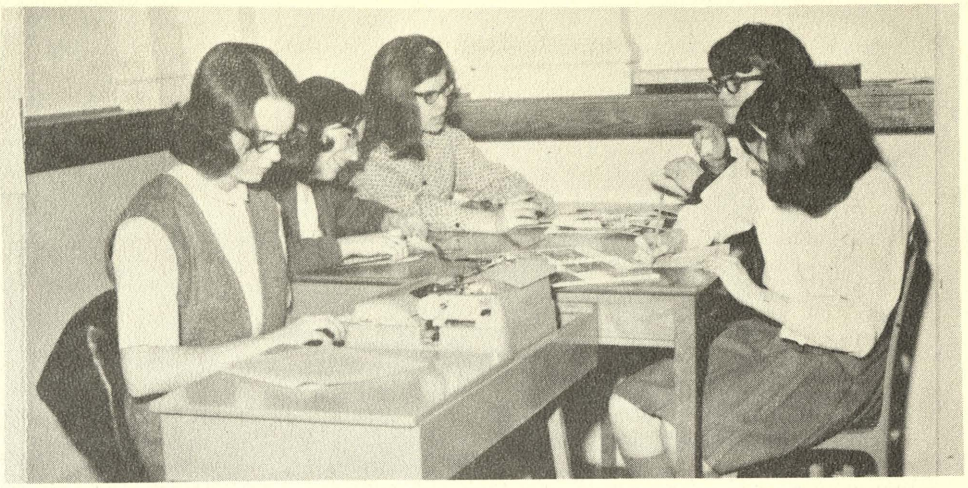
CLASSROOMS

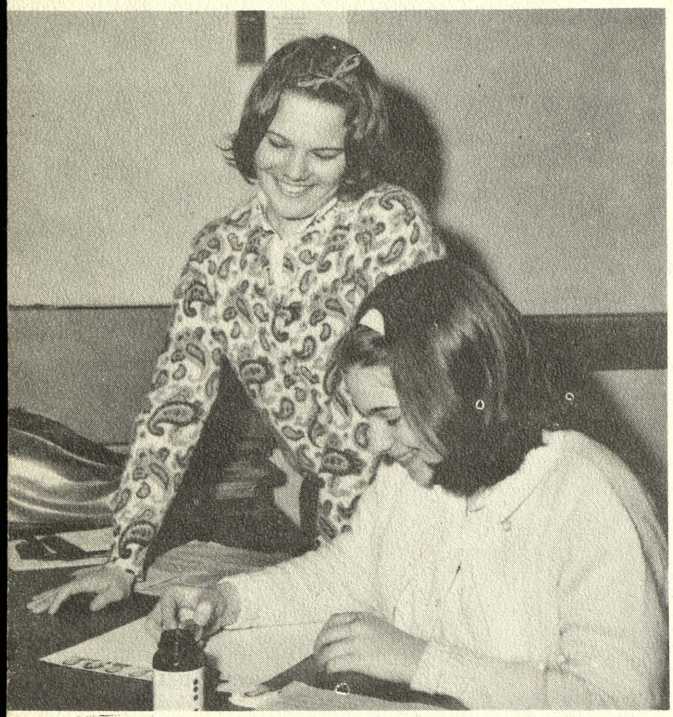
In our growth one of the most important factors is the classroom. The classroom surroundings stimulate the thinking that is vital to our well-being. To what extent we are stimulated depends on how much we apply ourselves. Our classrooms attempt to provide a climate that contributes to the develepment of our moral responsibilities, our mental awareness and our social consciousness to the full potential of each of us.



Staff Works on Publications



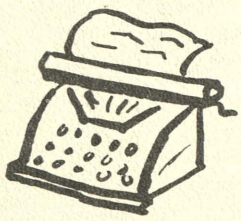
D. Adams, D. Iles, B. Tuck, V. Hartman and P. Modrall worked on the annual.



Elementary editors S. Schrems and J. Gaus.

Tasks performed by the journalism staff, under the direction of Miss Alice Arnold, were writing stories and editorials, typing, making proof corrections, sorting and pasting pictures, writing headlines, and discussing problems that either the paper or the annual caused.

Much of the second semester was used in putting together this year's annual. The printing staff, under the direction of Mr. Louis Soblesky, spent long hours printing and publishing both the paper and the annual.



G. Brown, J. Ryll, S. Sugden, D. Purcell, and S. Pinnell wrote captions.

Mrs. McDunnell uses the over-head projector to help teach the class about grammar.

Language Tools Are

Language is the passage way to communicating with each other. Correct usage of our language, poetry, literature and writings are emphasized in junior high English classes. After we learn the tools of reading, we learn how to apply those tools.

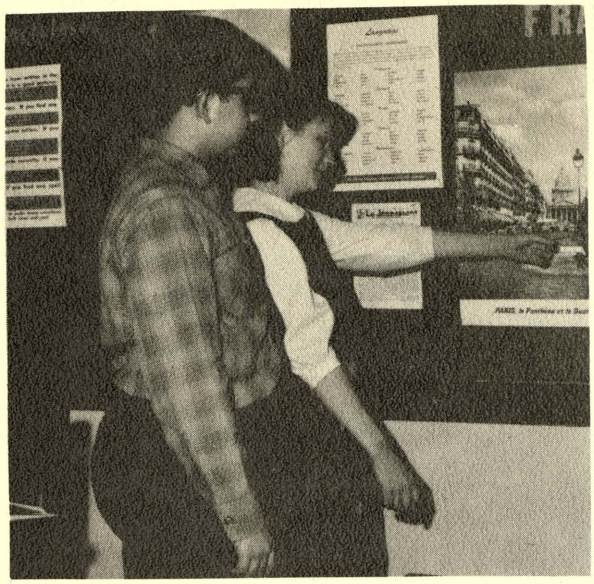
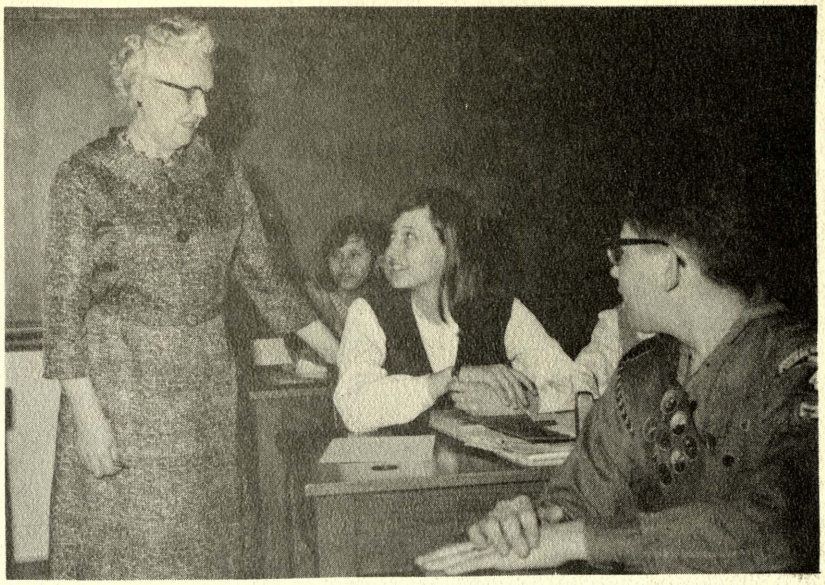
Does Bob know his "Ivanhoe" now?



Mrs. Bosley's conversational French.



How do you write the preterite tense of "hacer?"

Bridge To Adulthood

In today's world of knowledge, language is important. Our lives ahead may depend on how we are able to communicate with others.

Offered to the students this year, were Latin and Spanish taught by Miss Velora Faist and Conversational French taught by Mrs. Ortelle Bosley. Mrs. Irma Hausler taught Conversational German.

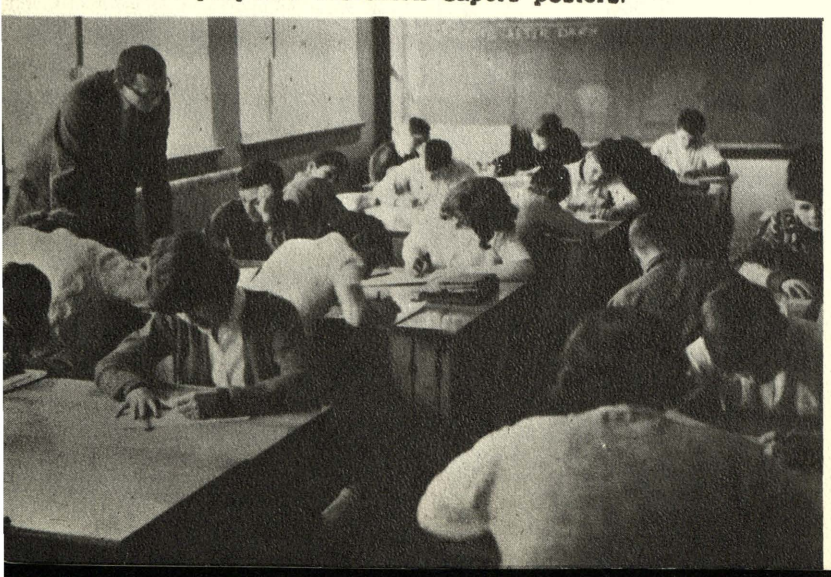
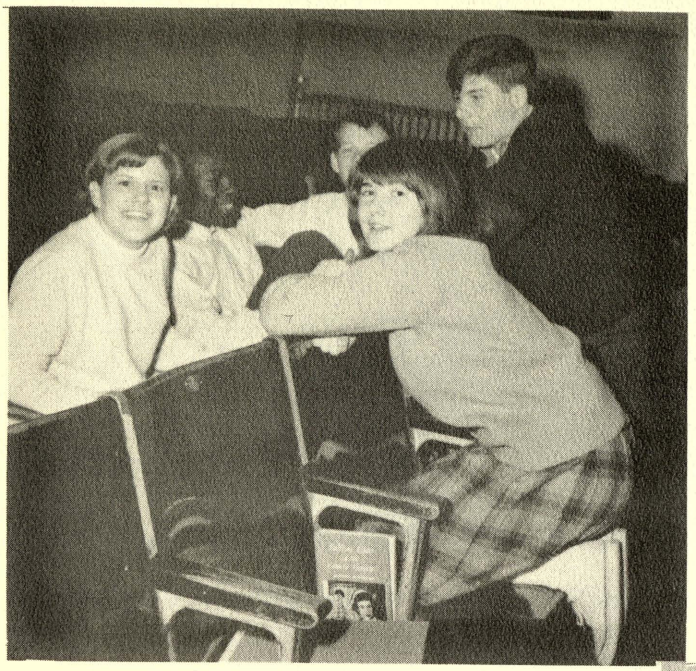
Electives

Beginning band students played "Rosebud" by December.

Eighth graders under the direction of Mr. Foulds prepared Northern Capers posters.





Students prepared an assembly program.

Ability to express oneself is vital to a well-rounded personality. Our electives strive to develop this ability and attempt to further natural talent. Even if we lack talent, these classes give us the opportunity of expressing ourselves.

These electives, that help us find our interests, also help us to discover and to know ourselves. To have an adequate knowledge of oneself is essential to maturity.

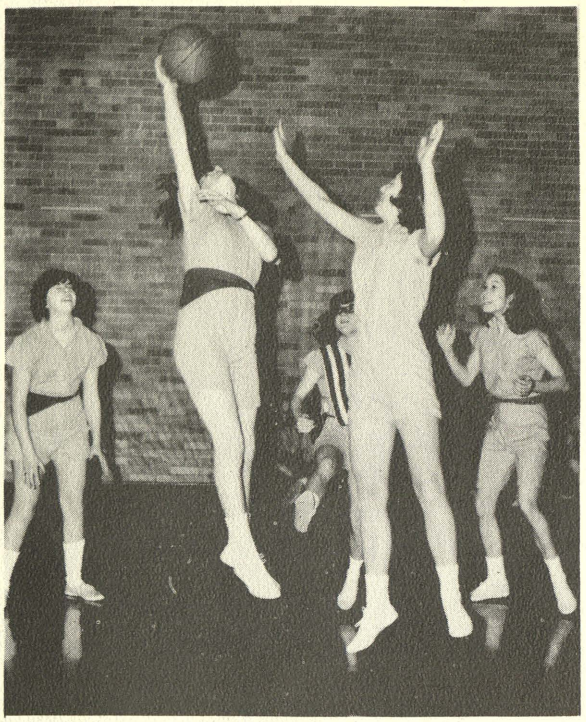
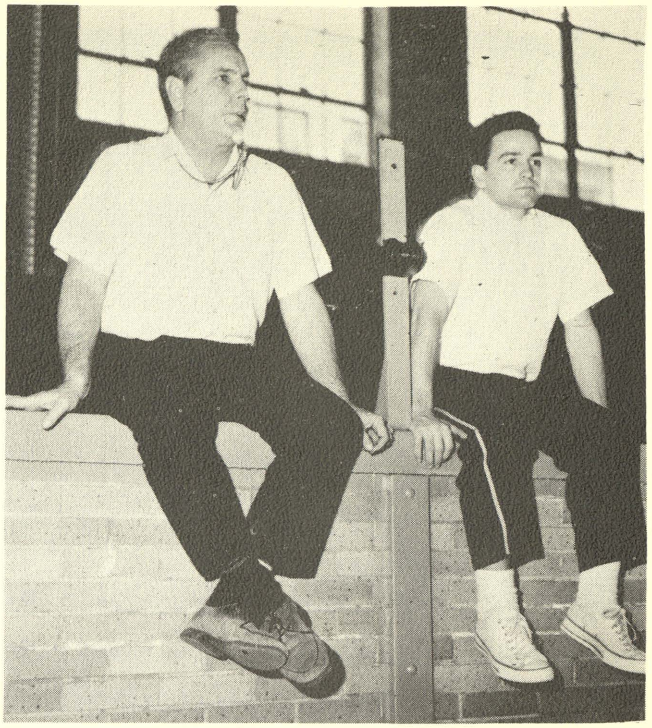
Dennis Purcell and Mr. Soblesky watched as Andris Danilaus completed a Mechanical Drawing assignment.

Miss Sowles explained the working parts of the stove to her seventh grade class.

Modern equipment, the tools of the home-making trade, were found in the home-making classes of Mrs. Hausler and Miss Sowles. There, pupils learned the basic principals of sewing and cooking, as well as budgeting, grooming, family cooperativeness and future homemaker needs. During the first semester, Mrs. Zackrie taught foods.



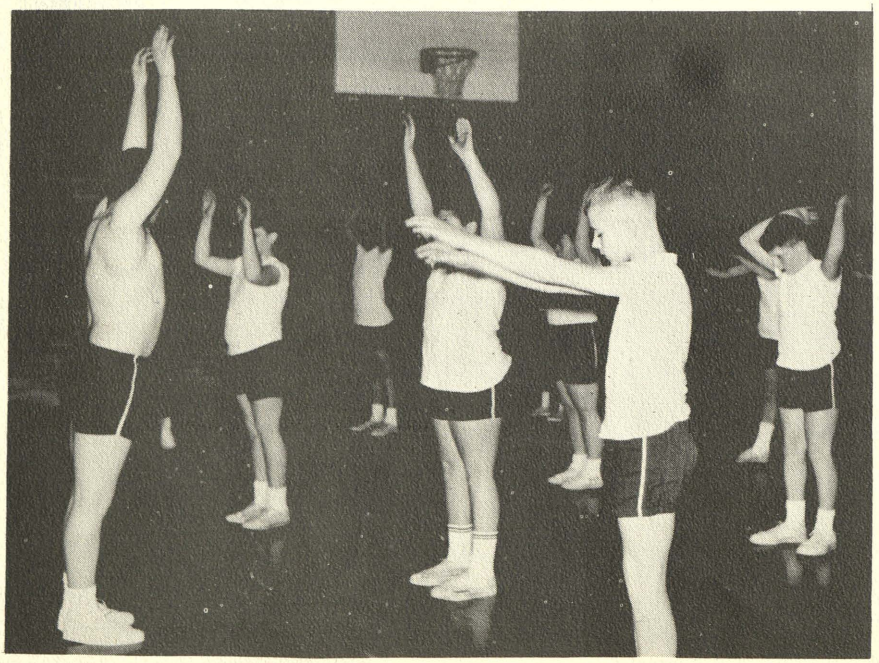
"Bend and Stretch!"

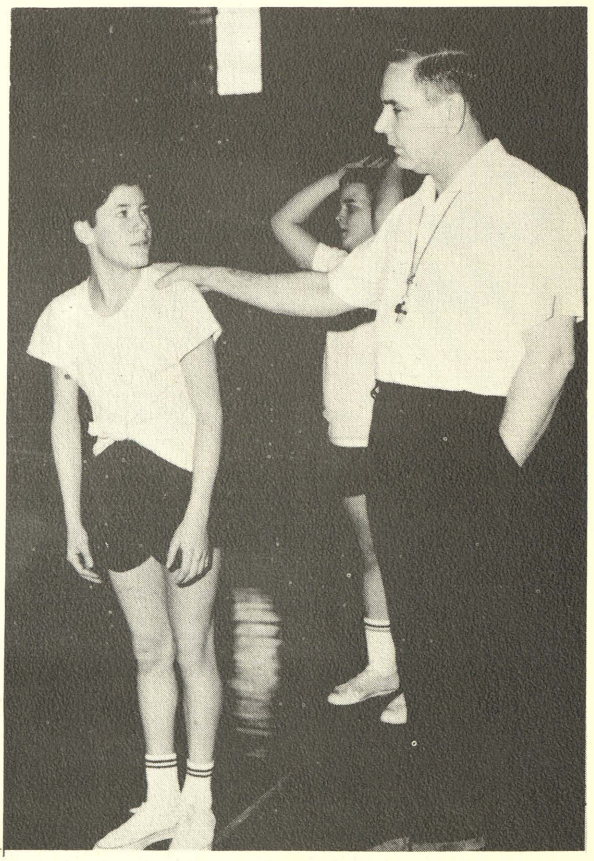


Mr. Goodenow and Mr. Steele

In gym, Northites strove to stay in top physical shape through calisthenics. We learned the importance of sportsmanship and physical fitness through competitive sports. In accordance with the late President Kennedy's physical fitness program Northites have maintained a high standard for physical development in gym activities.

LeRoy Yanna led "wake-up" exercises?





"It can't be all that bad," Mr. Goodenow told Chris Chambers

Northites were urged to develop a sound mind and a healthy body. Competitive sports and physical education classes were tools in this development.

Truly sports-minded persons participated in athletics not only for satisfaction in victory, but also for the dignity to accept defeat with equanimity.

We were proud of North's physical education program.

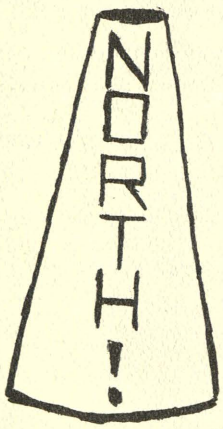
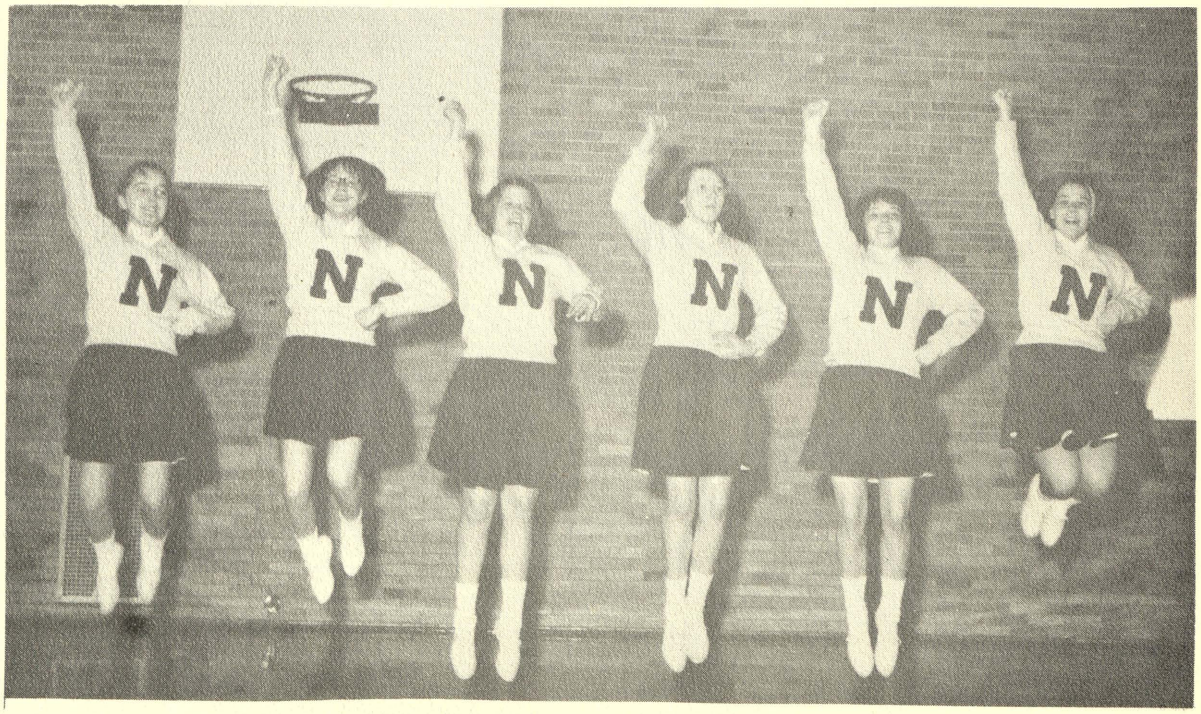
Cheerleaders Spark Enthusiasm

North's five ninth grade cheerleaders spurred activity and school spirit at all ninth grade games. The six eighth grade cheerleaders are replacing the ninth graders next year. The junior cheerleaders were Kathleen Cullen, Carol Zuzula, Norma Verhey, Nancy Silver, Nancy Neuhaus, and Joann Miller.





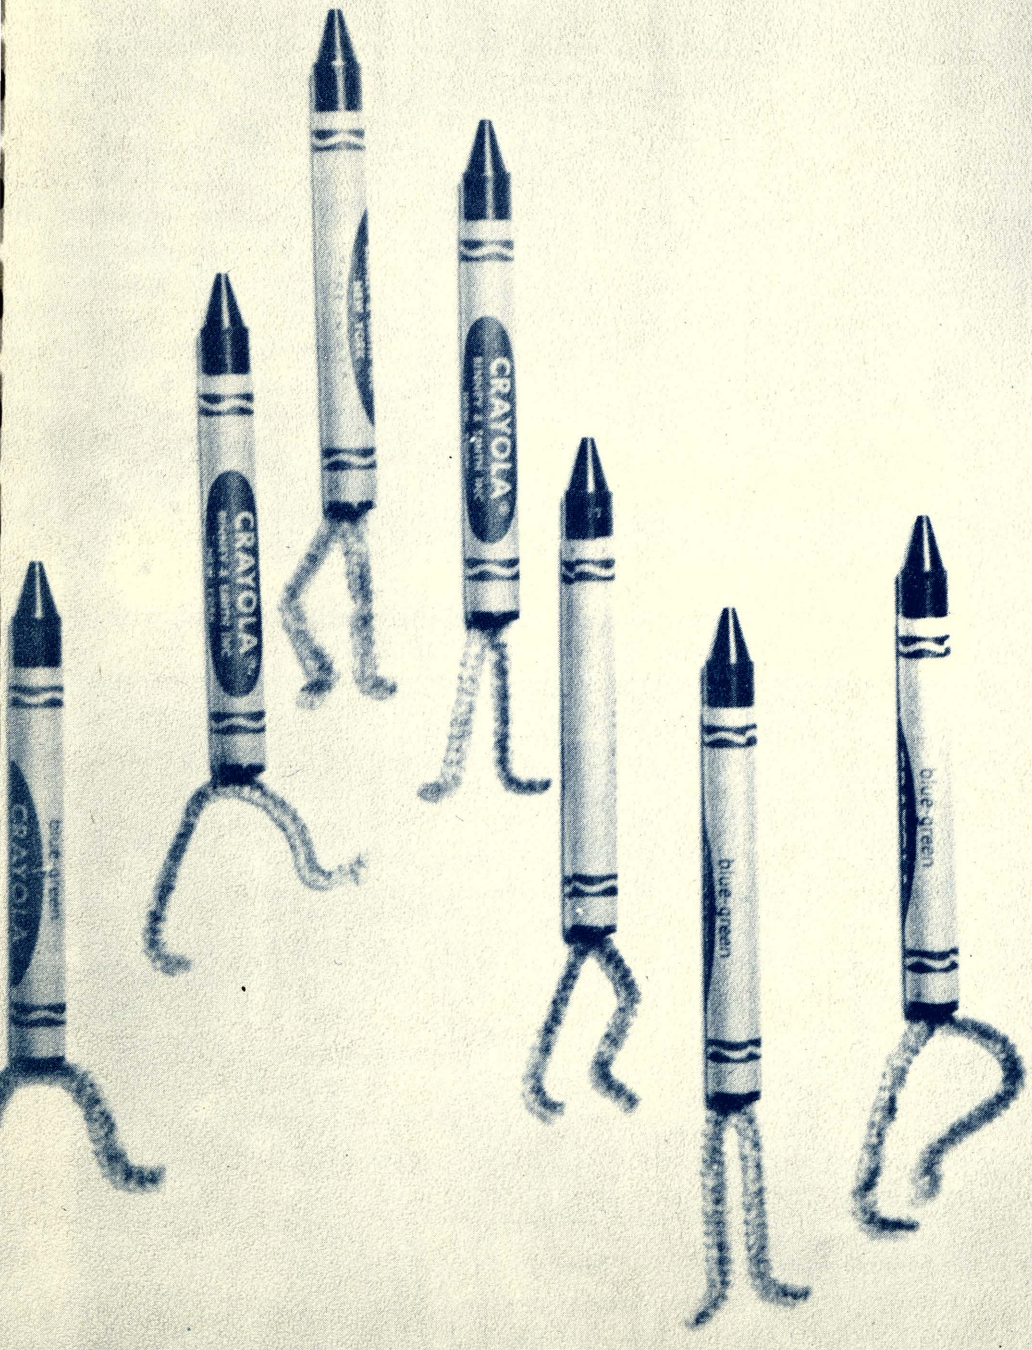
Senior Cheerleaders

Sally Fischer, Diana Iles, Sandy Schrems, Vickie Polaski, Jan Morrison and Sue Pinnell

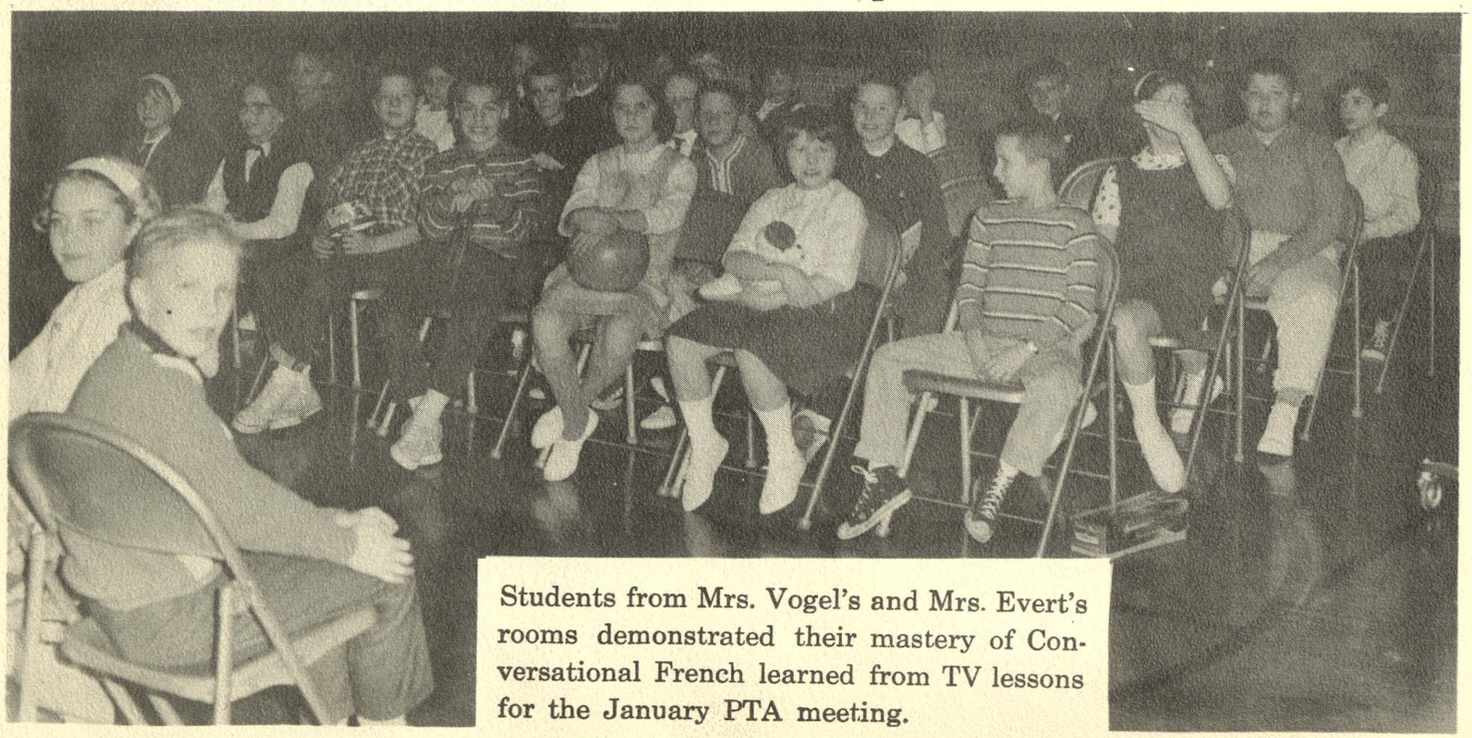
ELEMENTARY

Kindergarten is the first step toward a higher education. Continuing through the elementary grades, the learning cycle maintains our thirst for knowledge. That "thirst" is a very important tool for us to have during our school years. Without it, school becomes a threat to our continuing development. With it, we reach our potential.

In these beginning years the tools necessary for life-long satisfaction are learned— ways to communicate, to understand arithmetical meanings and to solve everyday problems.



Mrs. Eleanor Volk, Elementary Principal, with Craig Behrens and Lori Poulos.



Students from Mrs. Vogel's and Mrs. Evert's rooms demonstrated their mastery of Conversational French learned from TV lessons for the January PTA meeting.

Kindergarteners Profit By Varied Experiences

All children profit greatly from an environment which is rich in many kinds of experiences. These experiences must take four significant directions. First, experiences designed to maintain and improve his physical and mental health and to guide him to increasingly more satisfying relationships with other children and adults. Second, experiences designed to extend and deepen his understanding of his social and scientific world. Third, experiences designed to develop his competence in understanding and using the skills of communication. Fourth, experiences designed to open windows on life for him through music, the arts, literature, and rhymic expression.

The kindergarten program provides such enriched environment and aids in the development of each child's potential.

First Graders Learn Use of Basic Tools

The children have read many books, and now read with a definite purpose. They understand and enjoy the plot of a story and are able to read silently to get the thought.

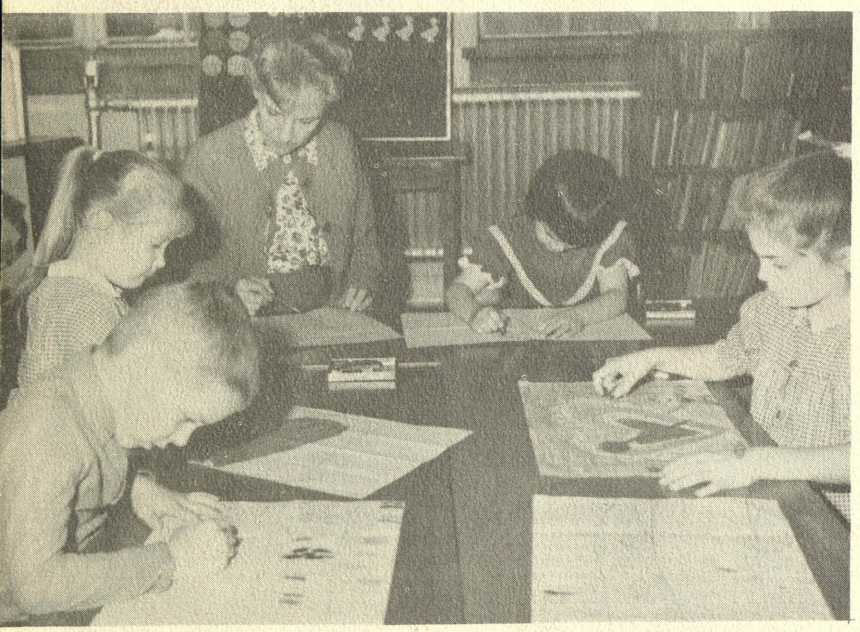
This year the children gained an understanding of the ways in which numbers work in our daily affairs.

Art was correlated with all of the subjects. Three D work, decorations, gifts, pendulum, clocks, murals, and an aquarium were made.

They learned how changing weather changes our everyday living.

Social studies was organized around the centers of interest that offered a workable plan for integrating the learning activites of the students. It provided opportunities for learning through experience involving planning, self-direction, and evaluation.

Mrs. Beckman 125



First graders of room 117 had a busy year. In the fall they had a unit on pets. They brought their pets to school and went to see some pets. They had a pet show and wrote stories and poems about their pets.

Students made bird books and studied about the wind. To help their study on wind they made kites.

Planting seeds and watching their growth was another project for the students. Their morning glories grew very tall.

Mrs. Palmer's students all agree that it has been a very enjoyable year.

Second Graders Visit Community Services

Second graders of 115, toured Gases's Bakery after studying the baker's role as a community helper.

They had a post office and were able to buy stamps, mail, sort, and deliver Valentines.

Their science unit covered many experiments with magnets, sounds, and seeds.

Mrs. Denno 115

In room 116, the students studied the community and community helpers. They learned about magnets, air, and the earth. A fall unit on insects was made by the boys and girls. They made several murals that gave them an opportunity to show talents with paint, chalk and different colors. The students worked on improving arithmetic, reading and writing.

Third Graders Learn About Pioneer Life

Third grade 209 read stories about Indians and Pioneers. One of their goals was to read all of the "Mary Poppins" stories. They had fun collecting her gold stars this year. They tried to be "Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious" students every day.

Mrs. Walker 209

Second and third graders learned to work, play, dance, and sing together. After reading and writing stories, they dramatized several of them. They weighed and measured things. They have done many arithmetic problems.

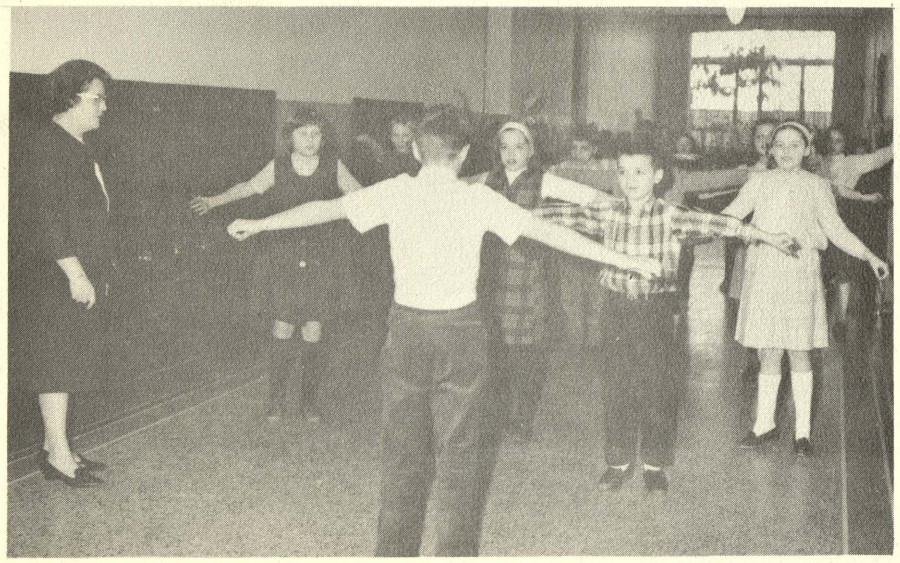
Fourth Graders Explore New Math and French

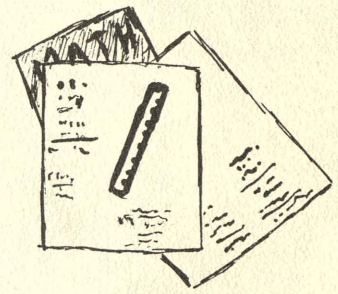
Fourth graders, room 218 studied countries in the western and eastern hemispheres. They talked about land surface, climate, people, ways of making a living, and the education for these countries.

In Modern Math they used number sentences in all processes with regrouping numerals. They used numbers in different ways multiplying and dividing on the number line, learning names for fractional numbers and saw relationships with numerals.

A new experience this year has been learning Parlons Francais by television. The lessons were given by Madame Slack and Harry Devlin. This language skill was given by listening and speaking with actions, pictures and songs. Many of the dialogues based on events helped them to understand foreign people better.

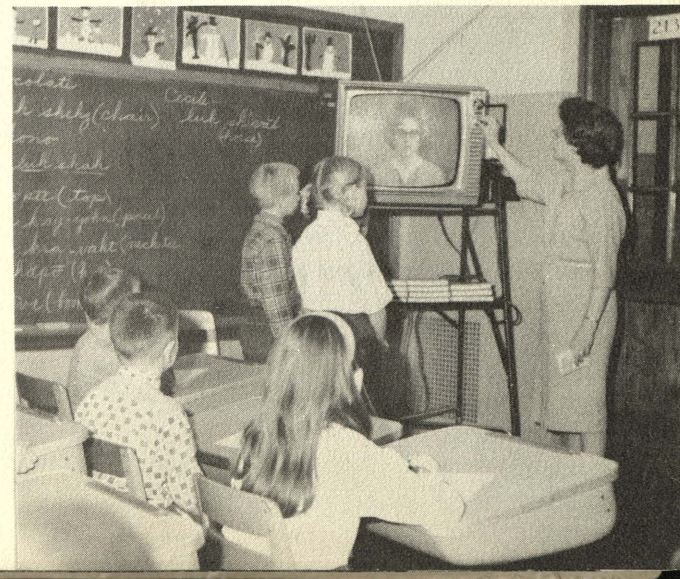
Mrs. Evert 218

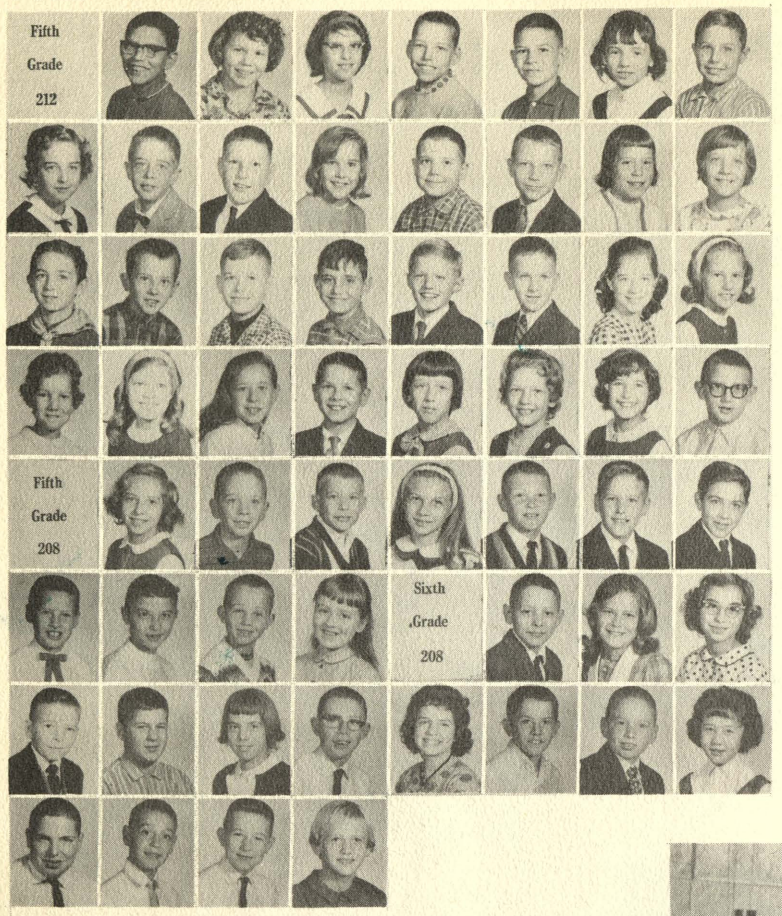




Room 213 has a busy year learning about many new places in our world. They studied about mountainous countries, deserts, jungles and places by the sea. They wrote to some people in the news and received interesting letters and information from Commander William Robert Anderson of the Nautilas. They enjoyed doing some of the French skits thaught them by Madame Slack on television, Channel 19.

Mrs. Vogel 213





Fifth Graders Study These United States

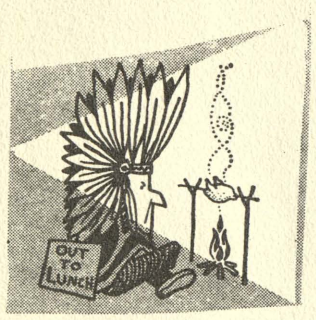
Fifth and sixth graders in room 208 began discussion of current news. By doing this, each of them was alerted to what was happening to other people and how it affected them.

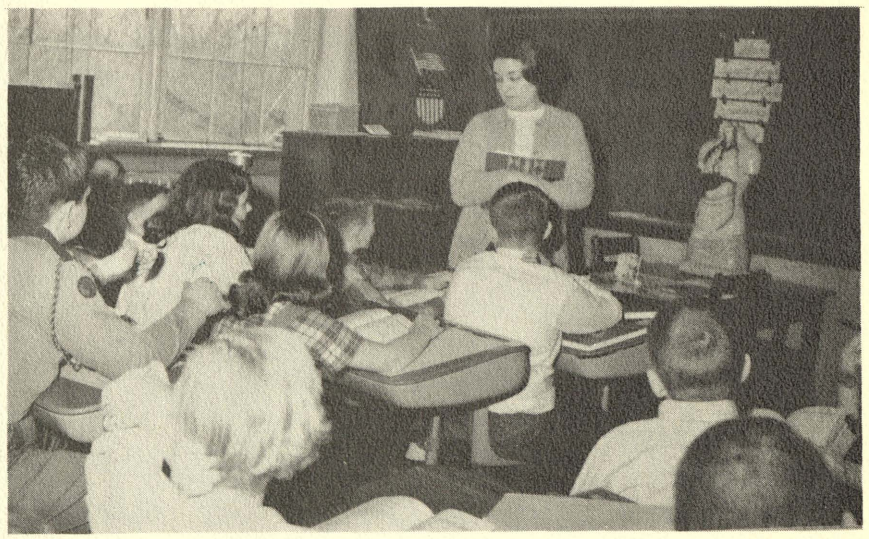
Through their social studies they learned how people live in Asia, Europe, North and South America. This helped them to understand why many of these countries were in the news headlines.

Their science studies of space and the human body helped them to see why Ranger 8 or Gemini were important and why scientists continually look for new answers in medicine.

Because they were trying to be good citizens as well as informed citizens, each part of their day helped them reach their goal.

Miss Dent 208





Fifth Grade meant studying about North America, becoming aquainted with our neighbors and learning more about our own United States. Murals, pictures and map drawing put to use their learnings. Pioneer dances aided in the understanding of the early settlers. When they were studying about conservation they took a trip to Price's Woods to see some of the things they had read and discussed.

This was the first year for daily physical exercises.

Another new experience for them was Modern Arithmetic which doesn't seem a bit different now.

Miss Spadafore, a student teacher from Michigan State, was with them until the Christmas vacation.

Sixth Grade Interests Focus on Science, Music

Mrs. Campbell's sixth grade particularly enjoyed singing this year as they had so many fine voices for work in harmony. In science they had outstanding work on undersea life and on rockets and space travel. They took a trip to the Delta Planetarium.
